Educational Highlights: In May 2007, I graduated cum laude from Florence-Darlington Technical College in Florence, South Carolina. While in attendance at FDTC, I made the President’s and Dean’s List, earned the Marion Daniels Scholarship, and made the Who’s Who Among Junior College students. Following graduation from FDTC, I entered the College of Charleston in the fall of 2007.

Research Focus or Project: My studies at the College prepared me for an internship at the law firm of Senn, McDonald & Leinbach, LLC, in Charleston, South Carolina. The title of my internship was “Cities and the Law,” and my focus while interning at the law firm was to learn about how the different levels of law came to be realized in a city setting. Through my experience at Senn, McDonald & Leinbach, I gained an understanding of how different laws could be interpreted and then applied.

Future Plans: My future plans are to first take the next year to enjoy time with my son. During this year I will work to obtain my GIS certification, then enroll in graduate school in the fall of 2010 and major in urban planning. After finishing graduate school, I hope to become a certified city planner.
